A despatch in the Free Press from Ottawa says that about 400 persons, many of them Americans, are in a state of destitution on the Liard and Dease rivers and Dease lake, caused partly by exposure and starvation. The report states that the people referred to went in by Edmonton, and concludes by saying: "The department of the interior has immediately taken steps to make an arrangement with the Hudson's Bay Company by which supplies should be sent by steamer up the Stikine river to Telegraph Creek, and from thence by pack train. These supplies are going forward as fast as possible to relieve the distress."

TROS. J. GOODMAN and S. S. BOGGS, who came in on Monday bound for Great Slave lake are prominent G. A. R. men, veterans of the American civil war. Mr. Goodman was for many months incarcerated in the famous Andersonville prison, together with hundreds of other union soldiers, while there he was appointed leader of a vigilance committee formed among the prisoners for their protection against a band of their fellow prisoners who were murdering and carrying on a general thug business among their unfortunate companions, and was instrumental in summarily hanging a number of them. EDMONTON TO DAWSON.

Vancouver, B. C., May 18.—Not many persons are aware that the project of building a railway from Edmonton to Dawson city is being quietly investigated by the Dominion government. At this moment there are several exploratory survey parties getting the ground preparatory to reporting upon the feasibility of the project. If the idea is carried the Eldorado of the north will have direct railroad communication with the east. The portion of the journey between Dawson and Dease Lake has already been explored, and a portion of the Stikine river. A party under the leadership of O. Dwyer, of the department of railways and canals, is now en route to make a survey from Hazelton to the headwaters of the Skeena river. When this has been accomplished, and it is expected that the parties will meet September or October next, the only portion of the route uncovered will be the portion from Edmonton to the east boundary of British Columbia.

EDMONTON BULLETIN, MAY 25TH, 1899.

THE TARIFF SITUATION.

The budget debate is naturally the most important which occurs during a session of parliament. In it are discussed the business conditions of the country, the state of the government's finances; and the tariff as it affects both business conditions and government finances. The recent budget debate was not less important because it was short. The features of the announcement made were: (1) The great increase in, and prosperity of, trade; (2) The consequent buoyancy of the revenues, and (3) The fact that absolutely no change was made in the tariff; (4) The declaration of a policy of tariff stability as against the formerly declared policy of tariff reductions to a revenue basis. The opposition acknowledged the prosperity of business, the buoyancy of the revenues, claimed the existing tariff as their own; and formally pledged their support to the announced government policy of tariff stability, with a leaning towards increased protection.

The pronouncement by the finance minister in favor of tariff stability is all the more remarkable because of the fact that if even there could be a time when the conditions of general business, and of the government revenues would permit further reductions in the tariff, that time is now. When in the face of this a policy of stability instead of reduction is announced the announcement assumes the dignity of a political event. The importance of this event is increased by the formal acceptance by the conservatives of the present as a protective tariff.

The low tariff interests of the country and the representatives of those interests would do well to note that the sharp lines hitherto drawn between the parties on the tariff question are now defaced, if not obliterated, and that the high tariff interests having absolute control of the conservative party, and of a very considerable and increasing section of the liberal party comprise a majority of the house. As a government holds power by vote of a majority of the house, not of a majority of a party in the house, the high tariff interests—if not in a position to absolutely dictate—are in a position to point out to the government that it stands in no danger of defeat by granting their requests; for they can depend on the votes of their alleged opponents to more than make up to them the possible defection of a number of their avowed supporters on any proposition for increasing the duties. Under the circumstances the prospect of further reductions in the tariff do not appear very bright.

In discussing the conditions regarding the tariff it is perhaps as well to consider first the claim of the conservatives that the present tariff is practically their own, and that there has been no real improvement of conditions under it,—that in fact it did not constitute any material progress towards freer trade. This claim can be disposed of in very few words. The leading differences are: (1) The radical reductions in or abolition of the duties on raw materials, or articles which stand as raw materials to certain lines of industry in Canada; notably the reductions in the iron duties for the advantage of the manufacturer, and the abolition of the duties on binding twine, barbed wire and corn for the benefit of the farmer. (2) The preference in favor of Great Britain and the West Indies, for the advantage of the Canadian taxpayer and to promote trade with those countries, and (3) The general reductions in duties amounting to $3,000,000 in the current year. To deny that these changes are not important or not beneficial is simply to ignore plain facts, which no amount of juggling with percentages and averages can alter. Even the most expert handling of figures cannot wipe out the fact of an average reduction;

but its importance is in its adjustment, not in its average, as the actual returns in increase of business and record of customs transactions are absolute proof.

The new tariff is therefore an improvement on the old one. It is not the same tariff but a better one. But it is still a protective tariff. This has been acknowledged in successive budget speeches by the finance minister, and it is because it largely embodies this principle that it is accepted by the ex-finance minister and by the party for which he is the financial critic.

It is protective in that its scale of duties is not determined by considerations as to equalizing the burdens of taxation upon the whole people. The question of giving special advantages to special industries admittedly enters into its composition. This is its protective feature,—the feature which causes it to be accepted by the representatives of the favored industries; and by the same process renders it objectionable to the representatives of the industries which are not so favored.

If those industries which produce the bulk of the wealth of the country and employ the larger proportion of its capital and labor were the industries favored by the protective features of the tariff, the argument for stability as against reduction would hold good, but if the contrary is the case,—if the smaller share of the wealth producing power is advantaged and the larger share disadvantaged under the present tariff surely the weight of argument is in favor of reduction to the point of fairness all around before the policy of stability is adopted.

In the course of the debate the present and the ex-finance minister agreed about one thing; namely that the wealth of the country—and the increase of trade which was so phenomenal and satisfactory—came from the farm, the mine, the forest and the fishery. In those industries the bulk of the capital of the country, and by far the larger proportion of the people are employed. The ex-finance minister was at great pains to point out that the tariff changes of the present government could not possibly have been the cause of the increase of production and therefore of wealth and trade in these industries, upon which the whole fabric of the nation's prosperity was built. This position was not even challenged—and could not be. Then if the lightening of the burdens on these industries by the reductions in the tariff had not been the cause of their increased production and prosperity, how much less could the higher and more burdensome tariff of the former government be given credit for past seasons of prosperity in those industries? The fact is that too much of both good and ill has been attributed to the tariff and its effect in the past. A burdensome tariff cannot make the country prosperous; and the country may prosper in spite of a burdensome tariff. At the same time it can and necessarily does affect prejudicially or beneficially the business of the country and therefore should be dealt with carefully. Changes should not be made for change's sake. But if it is found that the tariff distributes unfairly the necessary taxation or lays an unnecessary burden upon the great wealth producing and capital and labor employing industries, there is reasonable ground for a demand for its amendment by the representatives of those industries. Stability is a good thing, and is especially appropriate as the policy of a conservative administration; but fair play is a better thing and is especially appropriate as the policy of a liberal administration.

When it is shown that any certain industry enjoys an undue share of protection at the expense of other and greater industries, or of the people at large, a case is made out for a reduction in the tariff protection accorded that industry. The coal oil duty is a case in point. This product is of general consumption. It enjoys a protection of 66 to 75 per cent. This simply cannot be justified on the basis of a 40 per cent, or revenue tariff. This tax affects all classes, especially the poorer people in both town and country. It affects the rich the least of any. Therefore such a high protection is the more unjustifiable. The cotton duties are still practically at what they were under the old tariff. The general duty on these goods was raised one-fifth. From this, on such goods as come from Britain, there is a reduction of one-fourth, bringing the present duty on such preferred goods a fraction below what it was before. But this reduction is largely balanced by the increase of duty on goods which come from other countries than Britain, and do no get the benefit of the preferred tariff. While giving the British manufacturer a preference over the United States manufacturer, it leaves the Canadian consumer about where he was before paying a very considerable percentage too much for his cotton goods. That this is a protective tariff is proven by the high profits made on the capital invested in the cotton mills, the establishment of combines and in other ways.

A reduction of about one-seventh has been made in the duties on many articles manufactured largely of iron, leaving many of the duties still 25 to 30 per cent. The duty on the iron which enters into the manufacture of these articles has been reduced from one-third to one-half, and in some important cases taken off altogether. Everyone will agree as to the wisdom of the reduction in the iron duties, but the user of manufactured goods claims that he has not received his proper share of the reduction in the cost of the raw material to the manufacturer.

Under these circumstances it is impossible for the representatives of the great producing industries to accept the present tariff as a finality and at the same time be true to the interests which they represent. It will be for the electors chiefly concerned in those industries to see to the protection of their own interests as occasion offers at the polls. Now that there is practically a coalition of the lesser, but more protected, industries without regard to party lines; it will be well for the greater, but less protected industries to see that their interests also are cared for irrespective of party lines. The protectionist is only in favor of tariff stability against a decrease. Unless those whose interests lie in the direction of a revenue tariff make their weight felt at the polls, their will soon be a demand for increases all along the line.

REBELLION CLAIMS AND HALF-BREED SCRIP.
Speech by Frank Oliver, M. P., House of Commons, May 15th, 1899. From Hansard.

Debate on motion for papers in connection with rebellion claims moved by T. O. Davis, M. P. for Saskatchewan:

Mr. Speaker, I wish to say a word on behalf of the claim of Mr. Bremner, and to emphasize the difference between that claim and a large number of the others mentioned by the hon. member for Saskatchewan (Mr. Davis) especially as Mr. Bremner is now a resident of my constituency. In regard to a large number of those claims, there may be a dispute as to the amount, as to their circumstances, or as to the justice of acknowledging them; but I wish to emphasize, that there is no question whatever in regard to the legality, the circumstances, or the amount of Mr. Bremner's claim. These points have all been settled, and the only point that has not been settled is, that Mr. Bremner has not been paid. I am at a loss to understand why the payment to him has not been made, and it would be interesting to know the reason why. Mr. Bremner was arrested on the charge of being a rebel, and his goods were taken in charge by the authorities pending his trial for treason. The trial was held, Bremner was acquitted, but the goods in the meantime had disappeared. Had it been proven that he was a rebel, then his goods would properly have become the property of the crown; but as Bremner was not proven to be a rebel, the goods should have been returned to him. They were not returned, and he asks the value of them. It is no concern of Bremner's that employees of the government stole these goods. He does not care what became of them; all he knows is, that they were taken in charge from him by the government, and he asks payment for them. The matter has been tried out and settled in Bremner's favor before a committee of the house, and I repeat that he would like to know why Mr. Bremner has not been paid. I now press upon the government the desirability and propriety of paying him. By reason of this occurrence, Mr. Bremner is to-day practically a pauper. He is past the age when he can help himself, and he is to-day a pauper because the money owing to him by the country has not been paid.

In regard to the matter of half-breed scrip, I will take just a minute to mention to the house the condition which prevails in the Northwest Territories. The government long ago decided that the half-breeds of the country were entitled to scrip in consideration of their relationship to the Indians. That scrip was issued to them on the basis of the date at which the country was taken over by the government from the Hudson's Bay Company; that is to say, all half-breeds living in 1870 were held to be entitled to scrip. Had the scrip been issued to all the half-breeds in 1870, there would not have been any complications. But the first scrip in Manitoba was not issued until several years after that, and when it was issued, it was issued only to those living in 1870. As some of those who were living in 1870 had died before the scrip was issued, it was issued to their heirs. Scrip was not issued to the half-breeds of the Northwest Territories until 1885, and then it was issued on the basis of those who were living in 1870. No scrip was issued to half-breeds who were born between 1870 and 1885. Now, the half-breeds of the Territories claim, it seems to me very reasonably, that they were entitled to payment up to date—that in view of the fact that they were not paid for their original right to the land in 1870, at the time at which they became entitled to payment, they were entitled to payment up to the date at which they received payment, that is, up to 1885; and upon that case they have a claim for an additional issue of scrip. They claim that they have not received their rights, that their title has not been extinguished unless they receive scrip up to the time of the settlement in 1885.

In regard to the Athabasca treaty now being made: I am not aware what arrangement the government is making in that matter; but I consider it more than desirable that the issue of scrip should be on the basis of the half-breeds living at the time of the issue of the scrip, instead of at the time of the transfer of the land from the Hudson's Bay Company. The purpose of the issue of scrip is to satisfy the minds of living half-breeds that they have been justly dealt with by the government; and I submit that it is not a proposition which appeals to the half-breed to say that a man who died twenty years ago was entitled to scrip, whereas the man living to-day is not entitled to a settlement at all. The settlement should be on the basis of the living and not the dead. It should not be on the basis of a date of which the half-breeds know little and care less. If it is a settlement in regard to them, and not with reference to the transfer made by the Hudson's Bay Company to the Dominion of Canada, with which the half-breeds have nothing to do, and of which many of them know absolutely nothing, I again press upon the government the desirability of making an issue of scrip to the half-breeds of the Northwest Territories at least up to 1885, and the issue to the half-breeds of the Athabasca district up to date.

OBITUARY.

By the death of William Borwick, Edmonton settler has lost a life which linked its history to-day with the history of the period which prepared Rupert's land to enter the confederation of Canada. Born at Midhurst, in the island of Harrow, Orkney, 1806, he grew up in a community largely composed of veterans of the Hudson's Bay Company's service in North America, who had retired on their pensions and savings to end their days in their native land. After serving an apprenticeship to the trade of blacksmith for five years with George Stanger, like so many of his fellow-countrymen before him, Borwick in 1854 engaged in the capacity of blacksmith with the Hudson's Bay Company, agreeing to work "with courage and fidelity to defend the right and privileges, the factories and territories, and to aid and support the officers of the company to the utmost of his power." To what extent the British Empire in North America is indebted to such men as Borwick, who for over two centuries "with courage and fidelity" so well acted their part, is for some great historian to record; but a modern unassuming man like the deceased would be the last to claim any distinction or honors for the part taken by him in making the history of northwestern Canada.

A skilled artisan, diligent in business, of the best and most even temper and disposition, Borwick was the esteem and respect of his superior officers and fellow employees, and the natives of the country from his first arrival in the country, and these feelings of respect and regard have been shared by everyone coming into contact with him since, and his untimely death is deplored by all the "old-timers" and many of the new comers of this community.

Leaving Scotland in June, 1854, he came by Hudson's Bay to York Factory and from thence by river and lake to Edmonton where he arrived late in the fall. He served at Edmonton and Rocky Mountain house at his trade, and occasionally assisting in the store when large bands of Indians came into trade. He left the Hudson's Bay Co. after 17 years good and faithful service, in 1871, and commenced for himself as farmer and blacksmith in which he has continued for the past 28 years. A hale, vigorous man, looking little over forty, it appeared that Borwick had a long lease of life in the healthy climate of Alberta. He was in town on the 6th inst., next day was stricken down with pneumonia and on the 19th died, retaining his faculties to the last. His remains were followed to the grave on the 21st by a large number of sorrowing friends. The pall bearers were: Henry Fraser, Thos. Houston, George Gagnon, T. G. Ross, Jas. Kirkness, and Daniel E. Noyes. Mr. Borwick was married in 1862 to Elizabeth (daughter of Colin Fraser), by whom and his sons John, Peter and Simon, and his daughter, Mrs. Ed. Carey he is survived. Mrs. Borwick and family have been deeply touched by, and are most grateful for the many expressions of regard for the deceased, and for the sympathy which has been extended to them.

SESSION NOTES.

OTTAWA, May 17, '99.

The principal subjects of discussion in the house on Monday were claims in connection with the rebellion of 1885, brought up by Mr. Davis, liberal, Saskatchewan, and the question of a Canadian mint brought up by Mr. McInnis, liberal, Nanaimo. Mr. Davis pointed out that the settlement of rebellion claims on the Saskatchewan in 1896 was with a view to the election which took place in 1897, rather than to the rightfulness of the claims. Also that property was taken without justification or excuse by persons in authority, for which no settlement had been offered. He insisted the Premier for the which a finding had been made by a committee of the house in favor of Bremner, and yet he had not been paid. He also insisted that the half-breeds of the Territories should be settled with in full to 1885. He asked that a commission be issued to settle fairly and finally all these sources of irritation. Messrs. Oliver, Macdonald, and Fraser supported Mr. Davis.

Mr. McInnis made a very careful and thorough presentation of the case on behalf of a Canadian mint. It would be profitable to the government as an enterprise, would give dignity to Canada as a country, and would cause its position as a producer of the precious metals to be recognized.

Hon. Mr. Fielding opposed on the ground that there was not enough Canadian coinage required to keep a mint employed; and that to encourage the circulation of the money would interfere with the business of the banks; as would also the purchase of gold from the miner by the mint. At present the banks purchased this gold at a very small margin.

The proposition for a mint was supported by Messrs. Casey and Oliver, liberals, and by Clarke Wallace, Oiler and Caracallan, conservatives. The latter pointed out that each shipment of bullion of over $100 and less than $1,000 to the States paid $3.50 in consular fees and $1 in war tax to the United States treasury.

Ellis, liberal, did not see the necessity of a mint, and Henderson, conservative, called attention to the desirability of dropping the coinage of 20c pieces. The debate was adjourned on motion of the finance minister.

Further discussion of the Drummond Counties railway project was set for Tuesday, but the day was occupied by Sir Hibbert Tupper discussing expenditures made in '96 to bring to justice alleged ballot stuffers who took part in the Manitoba elections of that year. His purpose was to obstruct business until the redistribution bill is brought down. The opposition seem to go on the principle that as obstructive tactics were successful against them in 1896, they are the best tactics to follow; overlooking the fact that that obstruction was to achieve a certain definite result in plain right, while the present obstruction has no such result in view, and is indeed itself its only result.

The important business of Tuesday was the action of the railway committee in refusing the charter to construct a street railway and traffic bridge across the Ottawa river between the cities of Hull and Ottawa. The bridge was to be free for foot passengers and bicycles, but toll was to be charged for carriages and street cars. No bonus of any kind was asked. The bridge was strongly favored by the people of both Ottawa and Hull for many reasons, and by the people in the country surrounding Hull who desire ready access to Ottawa. The parties on whose behalf the application was made was a company which operates an electric railway from Hull to Aylmer, and present passengers to or from the Hull-Aylmer line, owing to the present circuitous route, have to use the Ottawa electric company's lines in order to reach the business centre of Ottawa. To save this traffic for themselves the Ottawa company opposed the application for the right of their opponents to build the bridge. Although no legal right of the Ottawa company was in any way interfered with, they put up a strong fight against the granting of the bridge charter. Common cause was made with the Ottawa company by the Mackinac street railway interests in other cities where the right of suburban railways to enter the cities is being fought by the present monopolists—to the very great detriment of the cities. To the disgrace of parliament, the application of private capitalists to construct a beautiful and useful public work at their own expense was the bidding of the street railway monopolies of Ottawa, Toronto and Montreal refused, by a vote of 72 to 36—to one, in favor of the monopolies and against the people. This is truly an age of monopolies, trusts and combines. The question of monopoly is really the great question of the day.

The elevator monopoly was heard from on Friday last, in opposition to Douglas' bill to allow grain to be shipped from last warehouses. The only argument they put forward was that they did not want competition. In this they were supported by Judge Clark, solicitor for the C. P. R.; Messrs. Ogilvie and McIlwain, of the great milling companies; Wilson, Winnipeg, of the bank of Hamilton, and a representative of the combined banking interests of Manitoba. It was a sight to cause gods and men to weep to see this aggregation of philanthropists, led on by R. P. Rohlin and N. Law, protest before high heaven their anxiety to protect the western farmer from the ruin that must overtake him with free competition in the purchase of his grain. What the ultimate fate of the bill will be is as yet difficult to determine, especially in view of the action of the railway committee yesterday. Certainly a strong lobby is being put up against the right of the western farmer to sell his grain to the best possible advantage as was put up against the right of the Hull and Ottawa people to cross the river by the best means attainable.

TELE JAUNE CACHE

On Tuesday afternoon, the Golden Era says, Fred-Holiday, F. Morin and J. Longtin arrived in Golden from Tete Jaune Cache, where they had spent the winter prospecting Swift Current Creek. They tell a very different story from Mr. Price, and as the members of the party are well-known their statements receive the utmost credit. The party left Golden with their pack train on Sept. 22nd and were 24 days in reaching the Cache, having had to double track in order to take Price and Evan's outfit along as well as their own. The party reached Swift Current, Oct. 19th, and set to work to prospect the Creek, which work was continued till Dec. 10th, when the freeing up of the creek pre-vented further work. Excellent pros-pects were obtained, showing from 5 to 30 cents to the pan. No bedrock work was done, but the depth to bed-rock where the party located at the foot of the falls is not very great—not more than 12 feet and in some places the bed rock can be seen sticking up through the bed of the creek. The party located for themselves and friends about a mile from where the creek joins the Fraser. The best prospects were got below the canyon, the wash running 15 to 80 cents to the pan. The gold taken from rim-rock was very coarse, and there is every prospect of rich ground being got at bed-rock. The party located 600 feet of ground and towards the mouth of the creek gold was also found but was fine. The creek is rough, with big boulders, and some of it will be hard to handle but a good deal of it can be worked at any time. High water is experienced in July and August from the thawing of glaciers. The party put up a cabin and built a dam to divert water for washing, ran a cut to drain the ground, whipsawed lumber for sluice-boxes and riffles, and got all in readiness for work when they had to come out for provisions.

There is abundance of gold-bearing quartz in the vicinity of Tete Jaune, the gold being visible to the naked eye, and this quartz covers an area of six or seven miles. The formation changes 40 miles this side of Tete Jaune Cache and the party reckon this country has a great future before it as a quartz mining field.

There are other creeks which show good prospects and on which no ground has yet been located. These are Baptiste creek, 14 miles below Swift Current, and Quartz creek 7 miles further on. On both of these creeks colors worth 10 to 15 cents to the pan can be got right along.

Mezars, Holliday, Morin and Longtin return to the Cache about the 1st of June.

The first car load of pure bred bulls shipped by the pure bred Breeders association of Manitoba and the Territories, according to arrangements made with the Territorial government, has left Deloraine going via Souris and Brandon to Edmonton. Fifteen head are included in the car. Some northern Alberta purchasers are: O. H. Smith, Wetaikwin, shorthorn bull; Alf. Hutchings, Edmonton, shorthorn bull; B. A. Van Meter, Wetaikwin, polled Angus bull; W. A. Van Meter, Wetaikwin, two polled Angus heifers; F. S. Mitchell, Edmonton, polled Angus bull.

Three days rain have given grass and crops a fine start. This has been a favorable spring.

Work on the excavation for Hamilton's hotel is being rapidly pushed forward. Some of the stone for the foundation and basement is on the ground.

MacDonnell & Co. shipped on Monday 240 head of stockers. This brings the number shipped by this firm this year up to over 860 head. Over 1,100 head have left this point this spring for the south.

Mr. Speers brought in a train of young stock which he is selling as breeding cattle.

Incorporation is being discussed by the town folk as the statute calls for incorporation in the near future.

Several settlers have come in this spring and purchased improved homesteads and brought in good stock. These are the valuable kind to have. The creamery is in full blast.
